About Us:

Once, when I was in 4th grade, my big brother broke his wrist while we were simply playing football, which is normal. However, what happened next was that a trainer applied cold water instead of hot water. This was not simply a fault; it could have escalated into a much bigger situation, and no person in my house was educated enough to do something. Since then, I realized that the most basic daily injuries are often the ones that escalate without professional help or education.

Every day, millions of wounds, fractures, and head injuries happen. However, that is not the most dangerous part. The most vital and dangerous side is escalation due to people being uneducated about the topic of first aid and simple injury handling.

Mission:

This is what FDI wants to do and how:

- Provide medical knowledge to teenagers and teachers through workshops.
- Train these students and teachers to respond to basic emergencies such as bleeding and concussions and other medical topics.
- Work with qualified trainers, students, organizations, and schools to provide that knowledge.
- Build confidence within school communities regarding basic medical knowledge.
- Create a well-educated education system within colleges and especially schools.

Vision:

FDI envisions Jordan as a country where:

- Its students and teachers can respond safely and confidently to basic medical emergencies in order to prevent escalation.
- Schools are safer for children and students, allowing them to pursue education in a safer environment.
- Basic emergency awareness culture is spread across communities.
- Long-term expansion across school communities can be achieved.

Problem Statement:

Why we aim to solve this:

- Many school communities are not prepared for basic emergencies.
- Incorrect first responses can increase the possibility of injury escalation.
- There is a gap in practical medical knowledge in Jordan.
- Escalation happens because people do not know what to do.

Target Audience:

- FDI primarily aims to focus on teenagers and students through schools.
- Our workshops may be hosted at external venues and marketed in schools, and this all depends on capacity and partnership agreements.

- We aim to work with hotels or venues instead of schools, as hotels and other organizations may offer the equipment needed for the conduction of the workshop.

Sponsorship Packages:

Future Doctor Initiative has moved from concept to early execution, with key foundational elements already established:

- Core leadership team of 6 members formed with defined roles across operations, media, and organization
- Official social media presence launched, reaching 20,000+ views on initial content and early audience engagement
 - Website created and published to support outreach and credibility
 - Initial outreach completed to 20+ organizations, including medical and educational institutions
 - Active discussions initiated with potential partners and training organizations
 - Workshop structure, pricing model, and target audience defined
 - Venue options identified and initial contact established
 - Internal planning meetings conducted to align on execution strategy and responsibilities.
 - Interviews for new members have been conducted and new members have been selected.
 - Important documents have been written such as: Code of conduct, proposal details, etc.
 - A legal framework to register FDI legally is being developed and worked on.
 - Logistics for the workshop has been set and is being developed upon if there are any new updates.
 - A starter venue has been set for the event.

FDI is currently transitioning into the execution phase, focusing on confirming partnerships, securing a venue, and finalizing logistics for the first workshop cycle.

Sponsorship Overview

Future Doctor Initiative (FDI) is an initiative that aims to improve medical awareness and emergency response confidence among students and teachers in Jordan through workshops, demonstrations, and guided training.
